Administrator’s Report – Lisa read Rudy’s report:

1. We are currently working on the 2026 Comprehensive & Innovations applications to submit in early October. There will be only minor changes recommended, as this has been a quick turnaround from planning/ programs that were put in to place last year.
2. Things seem to be moving along steady as service appears to be picking up as per program narrative reports and communication with providers. We may be looking to add additional prevention programing and possibly a one-on-one mentoring program in the future, as there remains a need for this service.
3. Remember that JAMs narrative reports are due by July 20th for the 2nd QTR. Please also make a strong effort to be as detailed as possible when completing the reports (the number count, referrals and outcomes) as it is good information for us to share with YJC and also use in planning for the future. Use the comment boxes for anything that may need additional explanation.
4. We are finalizing our 2025 Speaker Series contract will set up presentations for the fall. Also our sports recreation scholarship program is active in Glassboro, Clayton and Paulsboro for low-income families that seek municipal back rec. sport for their children in grades K-8.
5. Rudy wants to thank you all for the well wishes as this is the first time we have met as a group since the passing of his mother.
6. Looking forward, we will complete 2025 monitoring and continue to support our numerous providers with any challenges that may come up during serviced. It has been a pleasure to expand services through the County and it speaks to the dedication of those at the table. We wish you all well and hope to see you soon.

FCIU/Mobile – in May, they saw 244 youth, 124 from Gloucester County. They have one open family crisis petition and no youth at the shelter. It was clarified that we have two slots in the shelter.

BOYS AND GIRLS' CLUBS – no report.

CENTER FOR FAMILY SERVICES –

ACE – they have no youth for coaching, four for transportation, ten 2025 incentives to date and no super incentives. There are 24 slots left. Last month, they took a trip to Staten Island in NY and then the ferry to Manhattan for the 9/11 memorial. For all four youth, it was their first time to NYC. Three had never been on a boat before. There are very few coaching referrals. Judge Olgiati asked about the coaching program. It is a case management and counseling service to help youth maintain the conditions of their probation. The Incentives are positive reinforcement for youth on probation in compliance. They usually take quarterly trips with the kids. There are family engagement events throughout the year. Next month, they are planning on a trip on July 3rd to Nifty Fifty's in Turnersville, then the miniature golf place next door. They are inviting four families and each client can bring youth people. If a probation is closing out successfully, they give him a special gift like $250 for driving lessons or sports equipment.

PASO – the sex offender program did five evaluations so far, one eval is pending, one intake is pending, and five clients are involved with counseling. No discharges in 2025. Four slots are left for both evaluation and counseling. They are hiring.

Stationhouse Adjustment – They have three active cases, one referral pending and 42 slots open. Challenges are that referrals are low. Sometimes they get an “influx” of clients. Jacob just completed his first school year. Many youth come in during the summer. Referrals are from both the schools and the police. Many are from Paulsboro. Ellyse said she hasn't been getting calls regularly as they can do it in house. She will send an email to the police departments reminding of them of Station House services.

CGS FSO – Jennifer sent a report. Their annual contracted level of service is 25 youth. They have 12 active clients presently and have served 32 this year. They will continue to add new ones. They have been building partnerships with other community and YSC providers. They continue to have All in Therapy out to provide services each quarter. Recently, Success 1st came out to do a word play activity which the youth enjoyed. They continue to partner with NJ4S and Gloucester SNAP-ED for upcoming events. Clients have been

In response to questions, FAHS just for kids on electronic monitoring or home detention. It's additional support for Acenda. Bessie's team takes a whole family approach with all of the families they work with. Sometimes they assist siblings if it is within the household to support each part of the family.

Employment and Education - their LOS is 20 and they've served nine including three new referrals and two discharges. When they get a job, UAG gives them incentives to finish school and get employment. She wants them to get a second paycheck before any rewards. Their LOS is 15, they have had seven kids but most are carried over from last year. Challenges are getting referrals and connecting with the juveniles and their families. If they are more court connected, there's more of a requirement piece to help. They go into the schools to try to help with challenging placement issues, especially when a youth is "thrown out" of school and placed on homebound instruction. UAG is the umbrella problem solver, assisting with paperwork and the system to get social security switched when the kid gets "of age".

Incorporate United Advocacy – there have been plans to have UAG at probation reporting on Wednesdays. When they are on deferred disposition, they don't usually come out to probation. They will try to get them all at once. They do come in to sign their conditions so we can see if we can get more kids. Referrals comes from Lynette usually. ## ROUNDTABLE / ANNOUNCEMENTS

Stable Connections - Caroline Mitchell of CFS reviewed the new program. They focus on Camden and Gloucester County runaway / homeless youth between 16-22 in Camden and Gloucester Counties. They focus on prevention and use a 3-tier approach. 1. Not homeless but looking for activities and workshop looking for employment.

2. linkages to resources kids who are headed in that direction, they need more resources. They do intakes on kids tier one and two to assess additional resources, financial literacy, etc. 3. this tier is kids with imminent homelessness within 30 days. They have a case manager. Kids ages 16-17, they work with the whole family. For ages 18-22, they can sign off on paperwork themselves. If they have a stable home, we will work with the entire family.

The main three focuses are family conflict, financial hardship and mental health issues. This is a prevention program to prevent this. Financial (if they are eligible) and case management. Referrals comes from anyone. They link to the form. Internally from CFS programs, schools, social workers. Ellyse asked if there was a 17-year-old having strife in the home trying to run away no charges yet but there may be a mental health piece. They can help. She runs away, comes home for a short time, then makes things happen a crisis, then runaway pattern. She is "making" herself homeless and she's indicated she doesn't want to be in the home as the mother might be a trigger. They do have a temporary shelter together. The youth is 17. The older kids' beds are full but they can connect her with Stacey. They are open with CMO and mobile response. CFS would meet with the other services. We only have mom's version of things going on. Charges were declined over the weekend. They are trying to engage youth employees to help them. They can get the mom's name and phone number. FCIU would like to assess her but she is never in one place to get out and dispatch. She is constantly in patient or elsewhere. They hire a youth advocate but have case managers in their 20's who are more relatable. Kids get burned out with programs by the time they are 17. James asked if the youth is within a household but in danger of being homeless... they would qualify. Lisa asked if there is one shot four
